

The best methods of implementing a counter radicalization initiative using the Science of Reincarnation in accordance with the National Security Preparedness Group's Guidelines

Intro/summary

This white paper discusses the best methods of how to implement the initiatives of the Science of Reincarnation strategy to counter radicalization and terrorism in accordance with the National Security Preparedness Group's guidelines.

Background

If guns and bullets could stop terrorism and radicalization then terrorism and radicalization would have been defeated long ago. An ideological argument against another ideological argument also has no chance of success as any resolution in this instance is always subject to the individual's chosen world view. The Science of Reincarnation offers the first fact based logic driven paradigm that resolves competing ideologies and religions into one common formula.

The target audience is the children of the world. It asks three questions of them. Do you believe what you see? Do you see what you believe? Who are you going to trust, your teachers or your own eyes? The adults of the world are locked into their own world views, and are teaching those world views. This Science of Reincarnation offers a factual alternative.

This paper will be broken into 2 parts, first restating the tactical goals of this initiative, and the second the plan for its strategic implementation.

The Tactical goals of the Science of Reincarnation

The goals of this policy and its implementation are sequentially listed as follows.

One; write the textbook of the Science of Reincarnation as a first year college course. Then give it away both as a small book and as a free printable version online in 30 different languages. It should be written as a joint effort by the scientists doing this research as outlined in white paper 1 of 2 and updated yearly as new peer reviewed research is done.

Two; create the website in 30 different languages and maintain that website as well as an outreach program on the website that teaches this science in an easy to understand way. The website should also solicit case studies from around the world in each scientific discipline. There should be a downloadable, printable, free textbook in all languages available on the web site.

Three; accredit colleges globally to teach this course (there is a university in Malaysia looking for exactly this kind of course). Specifically we want to accredit colleges in Europe and Asia with large radical fundamentalist populations.

Four; we need to continue to fund this research in each of its disciplines and partner with anyone willing to join this effort, including our enemies. We specifically want to invite competing ideologies and religions to participate in the discussion and do this science with us. The science already supports and proves basic common religious tenants such as life after death and karmic principles.

Five; Political/Social implementation is done through education and by engaging all ideologies and religions in those areas that would be outside of the observed mean. An example of this would be the injunction of women not being allowed to drive in Saudi Arabia. There exists no reason in the science that would prevent women from driving, the science of reincarnation should make it clear that this injunction has no basis in reason or religion and would hold the women of Saudi Arabia as a group responsible for effecting this change while being supported from without. How can we better help you is the question we should ask them.

The strategy for implementing the goals of the Science of Reincarnation

From this platform of a group of accredited colleges, call for data and share data in an open architecture format to allow extremists to counter our arguments. This allows us to put indigenous college trained students in at risk populations and areas that can argue against radicalized belief systems and be backed up by scientific body of evidence. It is important to note here that the science of reincarnation undermines no religion but rather supports and proves religious beliefs that are common to all religions like life after death. This needs to be an open architecture to be most effective.

We want to engage enemy scientists and operatives. We should offer to train enemy remote viewers in programs the American intelligence community has used for years. That training in remote viewing opens the student up to the underlying science. He will never be very good at remote viewing if he cannot see that the science of reincarnation shows we change race, gender and religion from life to life. This invalidates apostasy laws from any religion and at the same time equalizes the genders and races while the science still supports their religion.

By publishing a book on the science of reincarnation similar to Mao's little red book or the Bible or Koran we would inject a scientifically driven document into at risk populations. This will enable us to put thought leaders in those at risk places and populations. This book should be on the web and downloadable. The result will be in 10 years it will put children on the streets of Islamabad, Calcutta and Singapore who are able to argue logically because they understand the science of reincarnation because they found it on our website where it was free.

This type of work is not defined in years but in generations and each succeeding generation is going to have an increasing availability to the Internet and homogenize our world. The expansion of the use in cell phones and access to the internet in the third world will be the delivery platform. Don't think this can work, how many people reading this have asked their children to explain a new device or new technology to them?

What we are looking to do is target the same population that our enemies target for recruitment and support. To start we are targeting universities with large Islamic populations and providing them with this science driven alternative to radical religious activity. We asked those universities who we accredit to help us do this science and we will help fund those efforts.

In fact examples of events of this science are everywhere. For instance a girl in Lebanon who remembered a prior life named 25 members of her prior family and also their relationship to her. This science treats us all equally; we can argue about beliefs but regardless of race region or ethnicity if one eats a high cholesterol diet one will get heart disease.

Non Negotiable Implementation Imperatives

Scientific Integrity

Outreach and inclusion

Free availability of the information

Actionable Morality

Brand Identification

This can be done most effectively by building an intellectual brand. Risking our scientific integrity is nonnegotiable. We will put the best facts that we can find from all sources on the website, fund research to analyze the events we're seeing and then freely give those results to anyone who wants to look at them in an easy to understand format in their own languages. We will solicit information on this science globally and give free access to that information. Products to be offered are counseling services for NDE's, gender support services as this may reflect genetic memories from prior lives, and funding for research at foreign universities. A complete list can be found in the charitable and business organizational plan in white paper 3 of 3.

Problems to be anticipated

Scientists

Scientists need to be cautious with their involvement in something called the science of reincarnation if it in any way creates scientific integrity problems. This goes directly to funding. Without a broad consensus of scientists who support this effort, individually they risk their own scientific integrity. If large groups of scientists from the different disciplines already named support this effort significant funding will follow.

What scientists need to do is explain in layman's terms the state of cognitive science incorporating all the disciplines mentioned in white paper 1of 3 with the probabilities for each class of event and then the aggregate probability for all classes of events together. No matter what world view or belief system a person holds this clear statement of our reality is the world they live in.

Our Politicians

Would be incapable of implementing this policy as most politicians lack the understanding of this emerging science and there would be no personal benefit to them to pioneer this science. Support for this science would make them seem radical as their own voters would not understand this science as well, particularly in the conservative American heartland even as this science supports their own personal religious beliefs.

Once you get past our own conservative heartland this initiative will provide our politicians with a way to connect directly to indigenous populations of the world where the idea of reincarnation is accepted more than in America. Both our politicians and their supporters would need to take the course we are talking about creating.

International Corporations, the Corporatocracies

More than ever it is the foreign policy of the corporatocracies that is shaping our world. Novartis threatening to withhold drugs from India if India did not extend patent protection on other drugs Novartis makes in contrivance to Indian Law is one example. Cigarette companies (annual sales 80B) suing Ghana (GDP 4B) over packaging laws on cigarettes is another example.

This science would disrupt power structures, the military industrial complex and lead to a retooling of our world. The disruption will create resistance from some corporatocracies but benefit others. This science is an example of retooling for the future. Tensions may reduce but the economic benefit of the western war machine will need to be retooled.

In Ohio a congressman got his district a 120 million dollar contract for tanks the Army did not want. His comment was “the people in my district are going to have jobs”. In India there is approximately one bathroom for every 30,000 women in most of the major cities. If we were to use economics as our sole guide in exchanging $120 million worth of tanks for $120 million worth of women’s bathrooms and then giving them to India then the bathrooms wins going away. Tanks pollute the air and leave holes in the ground and I’m not saying you shouldn’t have them. But the jobs created and the environmental richness that you will leave behind from the second act will pay dividends for generations to come. It will enable a huge category of workers to become better consumers and will unlock the potential that we see in the higher strata of Indian society like the telemarketers’ scientists and doctors. The net result is that huge markets will be opened up to be sold into and talent unlocked, a new resource created.

We know societally that greater affluence reduces both radicalism and births. Participation and support of the science of reincarnation would give the corporatocracies greater power, a larger customer pool, and more resources. Current military contractors like Halliburton should develop plans for this type of project implementation the same way they do for a military operation. What we need is the will of the politicians to do that. What we then leave behind is not the equipment for ISIL to form an army but an infrastructure and a new ideological framework.

Bankers will benefit the most by the way they measure gain, money. Once the Third World gets connected with cell phones which are happening quite quickly every one of those enabled people will be able to bank online.

The American Military

By distributing the Science of Reincarnation literature within operational areas the military would have a new ideological weapon that supports religious belief that is fact based, logic driven and derived from case studies that exist in the indigenous populations that are considered at risk.

Any conversation between an indigenous individual and a US soldier handing out the pamphlet should include the fact that they are both affected by this in the same way, by the science of reincarnation the soldier is presenting.

Our Radicalized enemies like Al Qaeda, ISIL and the Taliban

We should seek to engage our enemies in an ideological debate. This science treats us all the same, regardless of race religion or ethnicity. The debate should be public and on the web and we should be respectful even if our opponents are not.

For the first time there is a commonality of fact that needs to be presented. This will not be accepted by our enemies but the presentation of the information in a respectful fact driven way is to present it to those who would join our enemies.

Our enemies are recruiting in the west; we all know the stories of children from Europe going to join insurgencies in the mid east. By teaching this it would offer a counter point that is logical, factual and still supports their religious beliefs while invalidating their extremist positions. The debate will not be won ideologically with whom we are having it. The debate will form the course of instruction for those considering joining the extremist position.

With the recent shooting in Tennessee it has become clear that our enemies are pursuing a course of radicalization in place, in short telling our citizens to radicalize where they are. The Science of Reincarnation will provide a narrative where we can tell people to become rational in place where they are.

There is no alternative ideological measure that the US Government or any Western Government has to offer as even remotely as good as this measure. In fact individuals in at risk places have a greater acceptance of this science because it supports their beliefs with facts.

This cannot be done without a dedicated education program so regardless of how many bombs we can drop on our enemies this fight will continue forever. We are all subject to the laws of nature and a simple statement of our current understanding of our reality where science/fact/belief intersects would offer a logical alternative to belief without fact.

Foreign institutions

Foreign institutions should be engaged. Foreign populations in at risk areas have existing belief systems that this science would support with facts. This science should be done and taught at institutions around the world.

The science of reincarnation foundation would contain the public domain results of the studies done at places like Princeton, Stanford, and other institutions but would also invite peer reviewed participation from institutions anywhere regarding the ongoing research.

Foreign women

The discussion becomes the tool we use to teach both with foreign institutions and NGO's. We now have an irrefutable argument against moral imperatives advanced by spiritual power brokers. But it is the women's responsibility to change this from within as support for this change comes from without. Women's bathrooms, rape, driving in Saudi Arabia are all topics for discussion.

Local Engagement Example

Engage the Imama, the female Imam, of India with a dialogue about transgender Muslim woman. The conversation you are trying to ignite is a woman's rights issue but also a gender issue. This is not necessarily to spark revolution but educate through the press, academia, and accepted social mores. This in a location where there already exists a belief in reincarnation

Activism example fund for women's bathrooms run operated by SOR in India.

Foreign men

A fast study of 2 men and 2 countries, Ayatollah Khomeini deceased Iranian ruler and Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, current President of Turkey.

Khomeini issued a fatwa in 1987 allowing male to female transgender operations. Khomeini's original fatwa has been reconfirmed by the current leader of Iran Ali Khamenei and also supported by many other Iranian clerics.

Erdoğan recently described being transgender as a sexual preference that is contrary to the culture of Islam.

Which culture and leader is more progressive on this point?

Conclusion

None of the above groups are able or willing to implement this strategy of the Science of reincarnation.

There is a solution.

Crowd sourcing and crowd funding the science of reincarnation by the people who understand it and the science behind it

A full explanation of how to do this is given in white paper 3 of 3, how to crowd fund and crowd source a foreign policy initiative using the Science of Reincarnation. There is already in place a global group of supporters, individuals who are vanguards, and affiliate institutions.

The McDonalds theory of war states no two countries with McDonald franchises has ever gone to war with each other. Underlying this humorously titled theory is the real fact that common cultures do not fight with each other. Like the McDonalds' theory of war the science of reincarnation drives a common narrative. The McDonalds theory of war is taught at our military institutions and discussed in the think tanks in Washington. So should the science of reincarnation.

Politicians do not lead, they follow.

Conclusion

To implement this policy on a crowd sourced, crowd funded open architecture platform.
